STAR NEWS

bravest are honoured by the stars at glitzy ceremony

BRITAIN'S bravest heroes

■ by REG ROBERTS

BRITAIN'S bravest heroes were honoured yesterday at the Daily Express Life Saver Awards.

The Prime Minister met the award-winners before they joined a glittering host of stars at The Savoy in London.

Nell McAndrew, 31, Ruthie Henshall, 38, Andrea Catherwood, 36, Tamara Beckwith, 35, and Jenny Powell, 37, all spoke of their delight to be a part of the event, organised by our sister paper the Daily Express.

Proud

Before the ceremony, Tony Blair, 52, paid tribute to the winners at a reception at 10 Downing Street. He said: "They are a true asset to this proud nation."

The Life Savers included a solicitor, a builder and a teenage boy, as well as members of the rescue services.

And there were surprises in store for some when they were reunited with the people whose lives they saved. Sisters Nicola, 38, and Amanda

S BEAT PA

They battered their 41-year-old stepdad senseless as one shouted: "We're going to do you in.

■ by JERRY LAWTON

We're going to kill you." Their 36-year-old mum suffered cuts to her head and badly bruised arms as she tried to protect her sleeping husband.

Her screams awoke the boys' 18-year-old sister and her boyfriend, who dashed into the bedroom and dragged the pair away.

As the girl grabbed one of her brothers a knife he was carrying sliced through her left hand.

But she still found the strength to push the twins downstairs to the kitchen. One of the boys then grabbed a knife and held it to his mum's throat saying: "You always stick up for him. I'm going to kill you."

Revenge

When police and paramedics arrived at the mid-terrace house in Hartlepool, Teesside, the pair had fled.
They were later arrested in the town centre.
Robin Denny, defending, told Teesside Crown Court that the boys had lashed out in revenge for previous brutal attacks by their stepdad.

Judge David Bryant told them: "This was a savage and vicious attack in which each of you armed yourselves with a variety of weapons."

The twins, now 16, cannot be named for legal reasons.

They were each sentenced to three years in a young offenders' institution after admitting grievous bodily harm with intent, wounding, and assault causing actual bodily harm.

Andy's round-world ride

LIFE really is a rollercoaster for Andy Hine – he's done the equiva-lent of a round-the-world trip on white knuckle rides.

knuckle rides.

Andy, 38, has been rollercoaster crazy since the age of six, enjoying a staggering 35,000 rides over the years.

He clocked up his round-the-world distance of 25,000 miles on Nemesis Inferno at Thorpe Park, Surrey, joking afterwards: "I might have been quicker going round the world on foot!" Andy's theme park pilgrimages have taken him all over Europe, to Hong Kong, Dubai – and the US 141 times. In fact, he's travelled 10 times as far to get to the theme parks as the mileage he's actually done on the rides!

Bingo hall manager Andy, who founded the Rollercoaster Club of Great Britain, was awarded an MBE last year for services to tourism.

And he even married wife Christine, 40, on a ride in the States. Luckilly, she shares his passion for rollercoasters.

Andy, of Hillingdon, Middlesex, said: "That was like a dream come true for me because it brought together the two loves of my life."

De a sensational hit.

After all, there's everything a girl – or guy – could want. Our model Adrienne certainly couldn't wait to slip into the naughty but nice designs.

by KERRI O'NEILL

There's plenty to choose from, including pure silk bras, tangas and babydolls that are just perfect for a self-indulgent treat.

For those who like their indoor entertainment, the cutaway bra and thong set embellished with flirty feathers looks sure to tickle your fancy. If you prefer a classic look, the ivory silk chiffon babydoll – a firm favourite with our Adrienne – is a must.

In fact the whole range is perfect for any fella looking for a sexy gift for the love of his life. These sizzling undies make a woman feel both sexy and stylish. And we're sure you'll agree that it's worth paying that little bit extra for something so special.

Brits will spend a staggering £50 million on Christmas presents this year, but the smart money will be on something silky and slinky that'll make every woman feel like a million dollars.

And we reckon Janet Reger have got some of the best on the market.

So go on, fellas – give your girl a treat. And you don't even have to leave home to snap 'em up. Go to www.naughtyjanet.com and shop till you drop!

Lover's such a misery

MY boyfriend hates his job. Every Sunday night he's like a

Moaning

I've got him interviews with other companies and even got my dad's friend to offer him a job.

But he's still frozen in time. He always has an excuse about why he can't move on – and it's beginning to hack me off.

I WAS very confused when a London hotel rang up to report that they'd found my evening shoes.

A chambermaid had discovered the stilettos in the room my husband and I had just vacated.

Something twigged and I said "Oh, yes, send them to my home address". Two days later the mystery shoes arrived. They were high, they were red, they were super sexy – and they weren't mine. That night my husband arrived home and I sweetly sat him down.

I begged him to tell me all about his recent trip to London. He was horrified.

He sat bolt upright and started prattling on about "overseas markets" and "targets". I let him sweat.

Lover

Suddenly I pulled out the sexy shoes and said "So, what about these?" He nearly fainted.

I put it to him that he'd been in a hotel with his lover, but he denied everything. I screamed at him that he was a liar and cheat. But again he insisted the shoes had nothing to do with him – that the hotel had made a mistake.

the note! had made a mistake.

Later that night I went through his wallet and I found shop.

Again, I presented him with the evidence, but he still protested his innocence.
I know that my husband is cheating on me, but he's treating me like an idiot.

JANE SAYS: Your husband is waiting for you to make a decision. He's too much of a decision. He's too much of a coward to admit his guilt, so he's hoping that the whole situation will go away.

The ball's in your court. What do you want to do? Throw him ou?? Leave yourself? Start divorce proceedings? Insist on counselling? You've got the bullets, it's up to you whether you fire them. Being alone is a terrifying prospect, but you've really got to decide how much you'll put up with. All I'd say is don't let anyone take advantage of you and do call Relate (0845 456 1310) – whatever happens.

TO REPLY &

I RECENTLY received this letter from a reader. She wanted to know what she should do.

MORE than once I've found my mother and my husband together in compromising positions. One time they were both naked in our new garden sauna (he reckoned that's how you did it). Another time I found him in her bed (he claimed to have sleepwalked). Now he's talking about spending three nights a week in her London flat to cut down on his commuting. Would other readers trust them together?

Here are some of your answers.

Here are some of your answers...

Here are some of your answers...

I WOULDN'T trust any woman who would choose to be naked with my husband. Yuk! As for finding the two of them in bed together, your reader needs to realise that the pair of them are leading her a merry dance.

She needs to get tough and banish them both to London.

CHERYL FLOUNDERS.

CHERYL FLOUNDERS

MY mother and husband get on exceedingly well. They often go off on walking holidays together and I don't bat an eyelid. It's all about trust. If your reader can't trust her folks, then

If your reader can't trust her folks, then she's got a real problem.

MRS M MURPHY,
Liverpool

Now for this week's problem. What do you think this reader should do?

I'VE always tried to be supportive of my friends. If one is trying to raise money for charity or is selling stuff from her home, I'll always make the effort to go along.

But now I've started to hear some snide comments about me being a freeloader. The other week I heard a "mate" saying I'd go anywhere for a free glass of wine.

A few nights later someone else said: "You'd go to the opening of an envelope".

Why do poorle invite me if they don't "You'd go to the opening of an envelope".
Why do people invite me if they don't really want me?
Send your advice to the address at the bottom of the page and a selection will be published in TWO weeks.

MY 23-year-old daughter refuses to study or work because she's under the delusion she'll be decisored and you. She believes that she's so beautiful and so talented, someone like Sharon Osbourne or Kate Moss will make her a star. This is despite the fact that she rarely goes out, can't sing and definitely hasn't got the X Factor. I blame her boyfriend. He's put her on a pedestal and she can't see that she's just a normal girl who needs to get on with life.

JANE SAYS: Rather than JANE SAYS: Hatner than making light of your girl's ambitions, I'm rather concerned about her. It's not healthy for a 23-year-old to spend so much

Why don't you suggest that you pop along to her GP together and see what help is available? And chat to her boyfriend about taking her for walks and getting her to do some exercise.

At 23, she's probably already too old for modeling, so try to talk to her about more realistic dreams. And try to make her realise that we all have to work for what we want.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE: Hogwarts pupils get another spellbinding

POTTER'S BEST

And if you're not, this fab fantasy is guaranteed to convert you to into an admirer of JK Rowling's legendary wizard hero.

wizard hero.

This time Harry's plagued with terrifying nightmares. But his life becomes even more dangerous when he's dragooned into fighting dragons and worse as he becomes a contestant in the celebrated Tri-Wizard Tournament.

If that warm's here

Tournament.

If that wasn't bad enough, Harry is suffering hormone-driven adolescent suffering hormone-driven addressent angst.

He is learning that even a wizard who slays a dragon can still have a terrible time finding a date for Hogwarts Ball.

Like Harry, the series is growing up, so The Goblet of Fire is much darker and scarier than its predecessors – and all the more entertaining for it.

Sneering

Special effects create flying dragons, tentacled underwater monsters and a sinister living maze for Harry to battle on his terrifying mission at the end of which he faces a terrifying battle with evil Lord Voldemort.

Other magical marvels include a giant slimy snake, horrific Death Eaters and giant insects.
Personally, I found Alan Rickman's camp, sneering Severus Snape even more unsettling.

Daniel Radcliffe is in fine form as Harry, Rupert Grint's Ron supplies lively laughs – "They're scary when they get older," he says sagely when a woman gives him a hard time – and Emma Watson's now even cuter as Hermione.

Old favourite Maggie Smith's back, as is Michael Gambon as Prof Dumbledore, who manages to control Hogwarts' pupils without being able to control his accent. It, sometimes without warning, strangely slips into Irish. And Brendan Gleeson's a hoot as a mad magician with a bizarre roving eye.

Director Mike Newell strikes a perfect balance between telling a terrific story and fabulous movie magic to deliver a wonderful wizard show that's far and way the best of the bunch. Don't miss it.

Rochester.
His enthusiastically-lived life of booze, sex and brawls brought him into conflict with King Charles II and left him dead of syphilis at just 33.
When Depp says, "You will not like me. The gentlemen will be envious and the ladies will be repelled", he reckons without the impact of his charm and charisma, which makes Rochester likeable even at his most despicable.

Rochester likeable even at his most despicable. If there was any justice, Depp would win the Oscar for his portrait of a real-life Restoration man behaving badly but he'll probably be robbed because this film never punches and is packed with filthy language. Samantha Morton is somewhat strangely cast as an actress, John Malkovich, sporting a fine fake nose and even finer English accent, reigns as King Charles and Johnny Vegas unexpectedly turns up as a Regency reprobate. But it's Depp's triumph. Portraying Rochester from handsome young man to raddled reprobate, he makes it a must-see movie. Separata lies (15)

Apart from the absurd outbursts of four-letter language, the drama's so out of date it could have been made in 1951 when the book was published.

TO WATCH

THE BBC's worthy annual CHILDREN IN NEED fund-raising appeal has given itself a handy head start this year, a nandy nead start this year, thanks to this week's nightly auction show The Great Big Bid. So by the end of the main event which kicks off this evening at 7pm (BBC1), it should be well on its way to topping the previous overall total.

overall total. When all the money was totted up last year, the extravaganza had raised a massively impressive £34.2 million, every penny of which, we're assured, has gone directly to the kids who so desperately need it.
I'm sure you know the show's format by now – lots of shameless silliness in a good cause – but it's worth just pointing out that tonight's performances will include the stars of EastEnders, es will include the stars of EastEnders, Emmerdale, Casualty and The Bill showing off their musical talents. So let's not forget, the number to call is 08457 332233, because the call is 08457 332233, because the sooner we all ring and cough up some cash, the sooner we can get these people to stop!

ELSEWHERE tonight, a week of high drama and nail-biting tension (OK, I'm exagerating just a smidgen) comes to an end in HOLLYOAKS (Channel 4, 6.30pm) when the jury delivers its verdict in the trial of Justin Burton. Is Justin going to go down for the killing of Macki, taking the rap for what his stepbrother Ali actually did shortly before running out into the road and getting himself fatally splattered?

Or will he be found not guilty, allowing him to leave the court a free man and probably get his head kicked in by Becca's seethingly jealous hubby Jake?

Watch this space. Or, better still, watch the telly.

AND talking of people who've avoided jail, Val actually gets an apology from her sister Diane tonight (7pm) in EMMERDALE. She looks inclined to tell her where to shove it.

where to shove it.

TV GUIDE

...ON LAST NIGHT'S T

THE third series of LITTLE BRITAIN (BBC1) had a lot in common with Christmas. We looked forward to it for months. There was a lot of hype. Then it was over in the blink of an eye, and we were left feeling a bit low. It's hard to know why, exactly, since Messrs Walliams and Lucas are offering the same plateful of wacky British characters, just tip-toeing on the edges of good taste, and quite often toppling over it.

There were some new additions – like the disgraced MP Sir Norman Fry, who had to explain to a crowd of reporters why he was caught in a compromising position with a Rastafarian in King's Cross. Then there's the sleazy Mr Dudley, who has purchased a mailorder bride called Ting Tong from Thailand.

The funniest offering came from an old favourite, Dafydd, whose 'only gay in the village' line has more or less replaced 'God save the Queen' as a national motto. This week, Dafydd decided to become a rent boy, and placed an advert in the parish magazine thanks to a little help from the Vicar.

Horrified

True to form, he was then absolutely horrified when a large, sweaty miner came to the pub looking for business.

Derhaps the real reason why the show disappointed us was because it's been off the air for a while. It's had time to become like one of those programmes of yesteryear that you remember with misty eyes, until you find it in the bargain bucket of your local charity shop. Then you watch it and you realise it was never that brilliant after all. In fact, there was always something hit and miss about Little Britain.

In both of the last two series, there were a few, fantastically bright gems amidst a pile of stuff that the writers obviously thought was funny, even if no one else got the joke—a good example being the bizarre Dennis Waterman sketch, which has been dropped. But audiences forgave them for the dud jokes, and certain characters — like shell-suited chav princess Vikki Pollard, or jealous Parliamentary aide Sebastian —became national treasures overnight. At the time, of course, they were new.

At the time, of course, they were new.
